Lila's village was extremely hot and dry. The blazing hot sun shone brightly in the sky and the crispy dry leaves had all fallen off the baboa tree. In the centre of the village were 5 brown, dusty mud huts, with enormous curved roofs and a gigantic well in front of them. The villagers were miserable because there was no water to help their failing crops. The magnificent tall mountains stood beside the village and Lila knew that she must climb up the mountains to perform the secret rain dance and save the village.
